Do “survival of the fittest” and “selfish genes”—or love, moral sensitivity, and education—drive human evolution?

A hard-hitting new book and trilogy show why survival of our species now depends on a massive break with old style, old paradigm Darwinists and Darwinism as well as regressive rightwing Creationism.

Corroborated by scores of new studies, endorsed up front by leading American and European scientists, in the new third edition of Darwin's Lost Theory, Darwin himself, in page after page of his own long ignored original writing, makes the case for the primacy of mutual aid, education, love, and moral sensitivity as the crucial, higher order drivers for human evolution.

Part I, A Young Man's Bold Vision, explores the life of the 28-year-old Darwin in the critical months during which he first wrote of what became the known theory of evolution, for which he became famous. But discovered within his long unpublished private notebooks, long ignored, is a revolutionary new moral and spiritually progressive completion for his theory.

Part II, An Old Man's Surprises, 30 years later, follows Darwin as he writes of how, rather than being slaves of "selfish genes," far more often than we are aware, we are driven by moral sensitivity. Of how, though selfish, we are also driven by love to transcend selfishness. Of how, though fiercely motivated to survive and prevail, we are also driven by a transcendent need to respect and care for the needs of others.

Evolutionary systems scientist David Loye's recovery and reconstruction of Darwin's “lost theory” has been widely acclaimed. Among comments by leading American and European scientists: “a major scientific treasure”... “corrects an oversight in the history of science which has swerved the modern world off its track”... “of urgent importance to the intellectual discourse of the time” ... “unique erudition...an enormous and critical task...carried it off with genius”... “an immensely important book with an engaging and easy style.”

To provide an extensive scientific grounding for the forthcoming trilogy Darwin and the Battle for Human Survival, the new third edition for Darwin's Lost Theory has been revised and updated with special indexes tailored to the needs of an exceptionally wide range of readers—philosophers, theologians, teachers and students in all fields, as well as scientists and general readers.

In a vital update for books on Darwin and evolution, the new third edition and forthcoming trilogy are being published by the Benjamin Franklin Press with global distribution through online book sellers and The Ingram Book Company for U.S. book stores.

To encourage wide readership and use, the publisher has dropped the price for Darwin's Lost Theory to $16.95. Striking new covers, tables of contents, and excerpts for Darwin's Lost Theory and the forthcoming trilogy—Darwin's Real Revolution, The Battle of the Books, and Up Against the Paradigm—can be found online at www.davidloye.com.
